

JOINT PRESS RELEASE

3 may 2007

Internet users interested in Belgian news and users of Google's search engine may have noticed today that the websites of the Belgian French and German-language daily newspapers, members of Copiepresse, are again referenced on the search engine.

This decision was made jointly by Google Inc. and Copiepresse as part of the constructive dialogue that has resumed between the two organizations.

The websites of the Belgian French and German-language daily press will now appear without a "cached" link in the search results of Google's search engine, thanks to their use of the "noarchive"* tag.

The Belgian French and German-language daily press publishers and Google Inc. intend to use a quiet period in the court dispute to continue their efforts to identify tangible ways to collaborate in the long term.

 The « noarchive » tag is a tool for publishers to control how their website is referenced on the web.*

Contact :

For Google:

French :

Philippe Etienne
petienne@google.com
+33 1 42 68 54 96
+33 6 11 95 38 30

English :

Jessica Powell
jessicap@google.com
+44 78 3718 6408

For Copiepresse :

Margaret Boribon, Secrétaire générale
+32 2 558 97 80
margaret.boribon@jfb.be